Why Apply Heat?

Study explains effect

Scientists of the UCL (University College London), Department of Physiology, have found the molecular basis for the long standing theory that heat applied to the skin provides relief from internal pains, such as stomach aches. The heat doesn't just provide comfort and has a placebo effect – it actually deactivates the pain at a molecular level in the same way as pharmaceutical painkillers work.

Scientists have discovered if heat over 40°C is applied to the skin near to where internal pain is felt, it switches on heat receptors, blocking pain receptors. By blocking the pain receptors, the heat is able to stop the pain being sensed by the body.

Study published by UCL (University College London)

Rubber Hot Water Bottles have a higher standard of quality:

- The international standard for Hot Water Bottles BS 1970:2012 states that every Hot Water Bottle must endure a tensile strength test
- Rubber Hot Water bottles have to be stretched to 500% of their standard volume

Help preserve the green lungs of the earth!

We all came to this earth as guests. As in a hotel, we have guests rights but also responsibilities. You cannot leave a hotel room in a state of total destruction! One of our duties as a guest on earth is to take care of the forests and contribute our part in preserving them, planting new trees and protecting them.

In the course of production of our hot water bottles and gloves made of natural rubber or natural latex, we have been campaigning for the certification of plantations and forests according to the FSC guidelines for many years. You can find more information on this on page 8/9. Now we also offer rubber hot water bottles, disposable gloves and household gloves in this catalogue, made from raw materials from FSC-certified forests. This certification testifies that people who work in nature treat nature with respect according to sustainable guidelines, that social standards are observed and that we help nature to continue to exist.

The matter of the polybag

We still use polybags for our rubber hot water bottles without a cover and without FSC certification. The reasons for this are the oxidation of the protective waxes naturally present in rubber, which can escape if the hot water bottles are exposed to oxygen and UV rays for a long time i.e. on the shop shelf. The accumulation of dust on the ribbed side of the hot water bottle is unpleasant. The polybag protects against both.

In the past we tried to use bio-plastics for this polybag. Apart from the fact that the product price would have to be increased by around 25%, these products are still the subject of controversial discussion. A paper bag with the strength to present a 2-liter rubber hot water bottle hanging permanently on the shelf would be even more expensive as it would have to be printed elaborately in order to represent the product visually. In our opinion, this would unnecessarily increase paper consumption, because paper is also made from trees and these trees have to be re-grown!

A polybag is not inherently bad. It should be sent to the correct recycling process.

What is Natural Rubber?

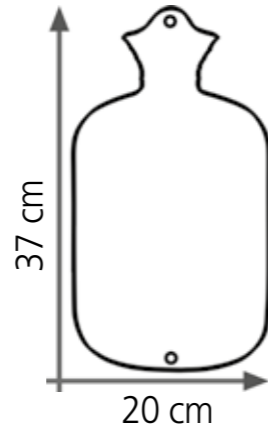

2.0 liter Sanger® Rubber Hot Water Bottles

One-Piece Moulded Hot Water Bottles – Safe, reliable and proven:

The Sanger® Natural Rubber Hot Water Bottle provides soothing heat in cold nights and increases well-being. Our technically new developed hot water bottle is constructed from a single piece of rubber with no bonded seams at the neck: The neck piece is now moulded integrally with the bottle walls, instead of being bonded. This makes the Sanger® rubber hot water bottle a truly one-piece moulded, water-tight product.

- TUV type tested
- Manufactured according to British Standard 1970:2012
- Certified to ISO 9001:2015

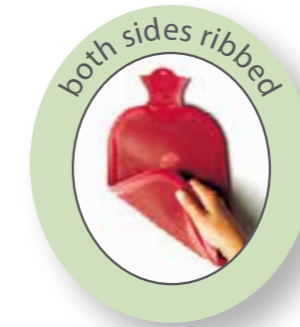

Replacement stoppers for hot water bottles available:

Ribbed or plain?

A plain side emits the heat in a fast and intense way, a ribbed side emits the heat slower and less intense. Hot water bottles ribbed on one side allow both options.

FSC Certification

A product only receives a FSC certificate and seal of approval if the entire raw material and production chain has been certified by the FSC organization. All stations of raw material extraction and production are re-certified annually in order to ensure continuous correct working methods. It is ensured that trees, soil and employees work together in a symbiosis that corresponds to nature and that this remains sustainable and future-oriented.

NATURE

NATURE PLUS

Latex gloves from FSC-certified forests

On these pages we present our articles whose latex raw material comes from FSC-certified forests.

They are natural products that can be returned to the natural cycle after their active life.

When latex is extracted in FSC-certified forests and plantations, it is ensured that trees, soil and employees work together in a symbiosis that is in keeping with nature and that this remains sustainable and future-oriented.
