The Secrets of our Cosmetics

Mango
(bot. Mangifera indica)

Traditionally mango is used in Ayurvedic medicine as a moisturizing and nutritious fruit. It has a low acid content and is therefore gentle on the skin. Mango provides resilience and natural radiance to the skin.

Avocado
(bot. Persea americana)

Avocado is a particularly effective moisturizer with healing properties. It contains valuable vitamins, antioxidants and anti-aging active ingredients. Avocado is present in aroma therapeutic formulas against psoriasis.

Limone
(bot. Citrus aurantifolia)

Lime has an antiseptic and firming effect, is invigorating and refreshing. It cools and smells pleasant.

Papaya
(bot. Carica papaya)

Papaya was previously considered a secret recipe for a pure and flawless skin. Today, the fruit is known for its high content of natural antioxidants and enzymes, stimulating blood circulation and promoting the growth of fresh cells.

Coconut
(bot. Cocos nucifera)

Coconut water and coconut oil are equally known in Ayurvedic medicine for their valuable ingredients. Virgin coconut oil restores the skin's own protective mechanism and the skin's natural acid mantle. Contains natural antioxidants, vitamins and minerals.

Tamarind
(bot. Tamarindus indica)
(also Indian date)

The pulp is hidden in the pod and in many parts of the world is used as a remedy for various diseases. For more than 3000 years, the natural fruit acids have been known to counteract skin impurities, remove dead skin cells and refine the appearance of the skin. They moisturize and protect the skin from environmental influences.

Gotu Kola
(bot. Centella asiatica)
(also tiger grass)

Today, Gotu Kola has a high profile and is indispensable in traditional Chinese medicine (TCM). In cosmetics, it supports collagen development and has a decongestant effects.

Sandalwood
(bot. Santalum album)

Fragrant wood from the high forests removes dead skin cells by peeling them gently and refines the skin texture.

Turmeric
(bot. Curcuma longa)

The traditional recipes for cuts, burns and bruises in traditional Ayurvedic medicine always include turmeric. In cosmetics, it stands for supple skin, nutrient richness and a high content of antioxidants.

Mint
(bot. Mentha piperita)

Mint removes dirt particles sustainably pore-deep and has a refreshing, refining effect on the skin structure. This makes the skin look younger and smoother.

Ginseng
(bot. Withania somnifera)

Ginseng has been known for thousands of years as a strengthening agent with antioxidant effect. It strengthens the nervous system and counteracts skin aging. Ginseng contains valuable nutrients for the skin and moisturizes.

Almonds
(bot. Prunus dulcis)

Almonds have a positive effect on the cardiovascular system. Almond oil contains folic acid and helps to restore moisture and the natural fat content of the skin.

Cinnamon
(bot. Cinnamomum verum)

Sri Lanka is the largest cinnamon producer with the purest cinnamon bark in the world. As a skin care product, cinnamon is a source of valuable nutrients, vitamins and antioxidants that nourish, firm and tone the skin.

Lotus
(bot. Lotus Nelumbo nucifera)

The lotus flower contains natural camphor oil that inhibits melanin production in the skin cells. This reduces skin aging as well as blemishes and pigmentation. An even complexion arises.

Kokum
(bot. Kokoona zeylanica)

Kokum is a tree that grows exclusively in the Sri Lankan high elevation rainforest in the interior of the tropical island. Many parts of the tree are traditionally used for Ayurvedic purposes. Tree sap, bark and the oil of the seeds are used as high-quality components of cosmetic preparations.

Licorice
(bot. Glycyrrhiza glabra)
(also Velme or Liquoric)

The root of the licorice plant is said to have antiviral, antimicrobial, anti-inflammatory and skin-protecting effects. It is nutrient-releasing, healing and stimulates cell growth and cell healing.

Cucumber
(bot. Cucumis sativus)

The ingredients of the cucumber are very gentle and can be applied to all skin types. It calms the itching and degreases the skin. Cucumber has a purifying and contracting effect on dilated pores.

Sugarcane
(bot. Saccharum officinarum)

Sugarcane contains glycolic acid, which cleanses skin naturally, removes fat and blackheads. Glycolic acid penetrates deep into the skin and thus supports cell renewal, which promotes a fresh, youthful appearance.

Certified Natural Bio-Cosmetics

Aloe95 – skin care gel: natural & certified

Aloe95 is made from 95% organic Aloe Vera plant juice, making it one of the purest certified organic Aloe Vera products in the world. The remaining 5% of the product consists of natural, naturally-derived and nature-identical substances. We use fresh Aloe Vera gel directly from the plant instead of lyophilized Aloe Vera powder for premium freshness, purity and the highest Aloe Vera content. Aloe Vera is considered a "miracle plant" containing about 200 bio-active substances. Fresh Aloe Vera gives the skin suppleness by moisturizing the skin. It soothes sensitive skin after hair removal or shaving. Without additional fragrances or dyes. Care Tip: Pure Aloe Vera Gel is also used for the treatment of acne-prone, impure skin, dandruff and for cooling and care after minor burns, sunbathing or insect bites.

Nature's Secrets Skin Care Series

Nourishing Cosmetics According to Ayurvedic Formulas

Natural cosmetics by Nature's Secrets NBC is based on traditional formulations of ancient Ceylonese medicinal plants, which are also of great importance in traditional Ayurvedic medicine in today's Sri Lanka. In the lavish herb gardens of the tropical island with heavenly climate, the medicinal and healing plants flourish lushly and are freshly processed into Nature's Secrets nourishing cosmetics. All preparations have long been proven and help to attain a fresh and healthy complexion, giving the daily feeling of a substantial cosmetic treatment! In the production process of our high-quality preparations, reliable German machinery meets with more than 2500 years old, traditional recipes in which only high-quality ingredients are processed.

All ingredients fully comply with EU directives. All preparations are free of parabens and are not tested in animal experiments. All of Nature's Secrets cosmetics are mineral oil free.

Aloe Vera (bot. Barbadensis)

Aloe Vera promotes cell renewal. It contains about 200 bioactive substances, such as vitamin B12, C, E, beta-carotene, sugar, anti-inflammatory salicylic and fatty acids. It is also referred to as a "miracle plant". The multi-active amino acids, minerals, vitamins, enzymes, proteins, polysaccharides and stimulants of Aloe Vera have a nourishing effect and provide valuable nutrients. Even Egyptian pharaohs knew about this nutrient richness of Aloe Vera and its nourishing, moisturizing effect, especially on dry and sensitive skin.
